“ To help to make an informed choice, there are a few things you should know about various pile surgical procedures. First there are the non-invasive procedures such as latex banding or perhaps coagulation remedy. Latex banding involves placing a tight latex band around the pile, causing the pile in order to shrivel up and fall off. This is a relatively safe method, but it can take up to a week to complete the process, when time this could get quite intense. Latex banding can only be used on piles of a certain size, because it's not suitable for piles that are too small to get a good lock on nor for piles too large to get the latex band around.

Coagulation treatment, which also causes the complete stoppage of blood to the pile, can be an alternative. This is less effective than most, but also carries less risk as well as potential trauma, so it is frequently used for the elderly or for those who might not recover well.

Neither has been shown in clinical studies to work better than the other, and while laser surgery might reduce the chance of scalpel-borne infection, it can also cause deep tissue burns if the surgeon isn't enough skilled. A hemorrhoidectomy does carry the biggest chance of permanent pile elimination. However, it also carries the biggest potential for extremely bad side effects such as long term incontinence and permanent nerve damage. These side effects are fortunately very rare, but you should be aware of them. In addition, hemorrhoidectomy has the longest recovery time and usually a long period of pain and inflammation.
